Joseph: Greetings to you my son, I am Joseph.

We are pleased with you my son. But we have more we would like you to do. You, my son, have the capacity for making rapid progress. And we wish you to set this before you as an object which you are determined to accomplish at all cost.

The obstacles which you will be asked to overcome, may seem unimportant to you, but they are not so. For there is a surface indication of an inner condition that must be altered. This means great change, and this will not be easy for you to accomplish. But the effort will be well worth your while.

These are the rules we wish you to set for yourself. They are:

Forget yourself and the desires of your personality. Remembering only the service of others. Devoting your strength, your thought, and your enthusiasm only to that.

Never comment upon a subject unless directly asked to do so. Before you speak, consider how and what you are about to say, will affect others.

Never reveal or comment upon the weakness of a Brother.

Remember that you have yet much to learn and therefore may oftentimes be in error. So speak with forethought and with humility.

When you are called, move at once, not waiting to finish what you may have been reading at that time or doing. And if you are performing a task of importance at the time, explain gently what it is.

Do not attempt to develop the psychic abilities or centers. For these doors, opened too rapidly, can sometimes be disastrous. At the proper time, when you have progressed to the proper point along the path, these things will come about normally and naturally.

Now this is all we will give you at this moment, and as you ponder and think upon these rules, I think you will find they are adequate for the time being.

Now as to your sharing this with others, this will be your choice. You may wish to share it with some of the members of Center R. These are rules that can be applied to anyone who is seeking progress on the path. But this will be up to your judgment. Here you will need to use your own guidance.

If you diligently follow these rules, we will soon be able to draw you closer to us.

Bless you my son, bless you.

Go in peace, go in peace. ☸
