

Caveat: These communications are informative teaching instructions for those who seek to increase their understanding of themselves and the magnitude of the future lying before us all. These lectures are not of a religious nature but rather deal with the science of human potential and evolution. This document is a direct transcription from the original recording. Although it has been checked for obvious errors, it has not been finally edited.

Copyright © 2012 Clyde Trepanier

June 12, 1976

Samuel: Greetings to you my beloved children, I am Samuel.

At your last gathering we spoke of consciousness and of brotherly love. At this time I should like to continue upon this subject of brotherly love and carry it a little farther. Most earth people, when they hear this term, think of it as being friendly and courteous to all of those with whom they come in contact, of doing some good here and there for their fellow man and so forth. But it goes much farther than this. It involves a love and an understanding of creation, of nature so to speak, an understanding of the things that go on about you, of how nature functions and why, and why it is important for man to know and understand these things so that he might do his part in helping nature to function.

As you know, the law of cause and effect is an important law and one that it is well to understand and so is the law of giving and receiving, for the whole process of nature is a process of giving and receiving. Each function of nature depends upon, other functions of nature. The plant life gives off oxygen which is essential to the life of man and animal and many other forms of life. Man gives back carbon dioxide and this is necessary for other plant life. Each depends upon the other. One cannot function without the other. If man continues to destroy plant life he will eventually run out of oxygen and without oxygen man cannot exist.

It is the same way with your planet itself. Man cannot continue to take from the Earth without giving back, without completing the process of nature. These functions have been so delicately designed that they must be kept in balance if they are to continue to function. Man has not realized this, it is beginning to dawn upon him in a small way. Yet, he finds that his knowledge is not adequate to bring about the balance which he has so greatly disturbed. Man has become so self-centered in his knowledge he has become egotistical so to speak. He refuses to search for knowledge in the areas he should be searching because these areas do not seem to fit into his learning and thinking. If man is to ever bring about these balances he must expand his searching into new areas. As long as he confines himself to searching within the range of the five senses he will not find the answers to many of his important problems. He will not find the answers that he needs to bring about the balance that is needed, the balance that he has so greatly disrupted. It has been so greatly thrown out of balance that it will take much more knowledge and wisdom than is possessed by your leading scientists and engineers.

Man must become aware of his responsibilities first and it is very difficult to fulfill responsibilities when the monetary value becomes so important. Those who would go with the New Age must become very much aware of these things. They must develop a love of all creation and an earnest desire to realize their responsibilities to nature and helping nature to keep herself in balance so she might give man that which he needs for survival. For unless man gives to nature what she needs for survival, she cannot give back to man what he needs for survival.

All of this is a part of brotherly love for all things in nature are as much a part of creation as is man and man is as much dependant on them as they are upon him. This is what we have referred to when we have talked about the etheric thread that ties all things together so when you disturb one part you disturb the whole. The laws of nature or creation or whatever terminology you should like to use, are fixed laws and you cannot change them or substitute for them. If these laws are broken the results will be negative and it does not matter what law of nature is broken, somewhere someone or something will suffer. So man must learn that he cannot change these laws. He can only abide by them and his actions must come within these laws or he will suffer the consequences. This is why man finds himself suffering today in many areas. He is reaping the results of the broken laws.

So people of Earth, we strongly urge that you study nature closely. Learn her laws and be willing to expand your consciousness beyond the five senses, for even in the physical form you find yourself today, you have other senses that can be developed and used if you but try. In other generations or civilizations you were aware of many of these senses and did use and develop them. So again it is going to be necessary for man to come into this learning and understanding in order that this planet and it's people may survive. And this my friends will be a great accomplishment and a great step forward in the evolution of earth man and this my friends is a part of what the New Age will be all about, new learning and new understanding.

I extend to each of you my most sincere love and blessings and I ask the blessings of all the Great Ones be invoked upon each of you and those who are absent from the circle.

Go in Peace. ♣