Teacher: Peace, peace, peace.

Beloved, ye seek many things in your search. Ye seek understanding, ye seek to know the truths that will carry you on the path of great experiences, ye seek to know the secrets of the mystics. These things, my beloved, are all yours to receive.

Each of you is a beloved child of the most high. All things that have been created, were created for you. It is yours to claim. Why do you not claim these things? Why do you not receive your rightful place? It is for you to take the step, and as you take this step, none will hold you back. Man is his own worst enemy.

Man can so easily recognize his limitations, blocks, that do not exist.

The hate, the resentment, and the greed that man holds within himself and refuses to let go of, is the thing that holds Earth man in bondage more than anything today. This has been pointed out to man so many times through the generations, yet he fails to see these blocks, these chains that hold him in bondage. I say to you, beloved, let go of these things, replace these things with joy, with love and with understanding. The great problems that exist on planet Earth today could be solved so easily if man would leave these things out of his negotiations. If he would sit down, man to man, with the purpose in his heart of doing that which is for the good of all mankind. For that which is good for all mankind, will solve all problems.

No problem was ever solved with an attitude of mind of accomplishing for self. It is well to keep one's heart joyous, grateful, to feel an appreciation, a gratefulness for that which comes our way. If one will but maintain an attitude of this type, and see in all men a part of self, a realization of a oneness, a realization that all men are great and that all men will sooner or later come into his pure state of being, that each man is climbing, as am I, toward this goal. Some are on one rung of the ladder and others may be upon a higher, or lower rung, but what matters this? All mankind is climbing together, attempting knowingly or unknowingly to reach this stage of pure being.

Beloved ones, all of you on the path of truth shall pass through many doors in a short period of time, and you shall close each of these doors behind you. In each room through which you pass you will have great experiences by which you are to grow and reach new heights in truth. Make the best of each of these experiences. Allow yourself to get the most from each, and by so doing, you will have reached another rung on the ladder. And when the new Age, into which you are entering, has blossomed forth, you shall find yourself to be a new being in stature, in understanding. Allow universal love to blossom forth in your consciousness, that you might receive in great abundance, that which is rightfully yours.

Peace, Peace, Peace. ♣
