

Caveat: These communications are informative teaching instructions for those who seek to increase their understanding of themselves and the magnitude of the future lying before us all. These lectures are not of a religious nature but rather deal with the science of human potential and evolution. This document is a direct transcription from the original recording. Although it has been checked for obvious errors, it has not been finally edited.

Copyright © 2012 Clyde Trepanier

August 21, 1979

Samuel: Greetings to you, my children. I am Samuel.

You were wondering about Man's regression and trying to fit that into what has been said at times: that Man does not ever lose that which he has gained. I would like to say just a few words concerning this.

Man never loses an experience that he has had. It will always remain somewhere in the portals of his mind, but Man, through the satisfying of his lower self and developing greed, hatred, lust etc., gradually buries all this deep in his mind and they are lost to him so far as his conscious state is concerned. But they are always there and will at sometime, when he has seen the errors of his ways and made restitutions, these will again surface and he will be the Man that he once was.

When Man first reached the final state of his physical development, he was a beautiful being, one of great intellect and wisdom, much greater than he is today. He had built for himself a most beautiful and perfect body, beautiful and magnificent civilizations patterned after the great civilization from which he came, the Etheric.

Note the magnitude of these great civilizations, their paintings, their carvings, the massiveness of their architecture. Many of your people believe that these paintings and carvings, symbols, were of a religious nature. Some believe that they are an indication of a superstitious state of mind, but this is far from the truth.

These carvings and symbols were the writings, paintings of the people at that time. They wrote in symbols and pictures for this is the way they communicated, not a word was uttered, their communication was by mind, by projected picture and symbols to those with whom they were communicating. In this type of communication there can be no misunderstanding, no error, no need for explanation for all is clear in the mind. This is the perfect way for communicating but has been lost over the centuries of time. Man, through the clouding of his mind, has lost these arts along with many others.

These early civilizations understood and used electricity in more advanced ways than you do. They understood thoroughly atomic energy, they used high frequency sound waves, they knew the art of levitation and used it. They were well acquainted with the law of mutation in matter. Long has your science sought to uncover the methods used by these ancients to harden copper. The hardening of copper was brought about by the understanding and use of the law of mutation. Certain corrosive acids were used along with high powered charges of electricity to bring about instant changes in metals. They understood all of the scientific things that your people understand today, plus much more that you do not as yet know.

They had great knowledge of drugs. They understood more about drugs than do your people of today but they did not use them for curative purposes for they felt that the poisonous results were worse than the disease itself. When there was, what they considered to be a serious illness, the person was put into a hypnotic state and told to correct the irritation that was causing the problem. Sometimes this hypnotic procedure went on for days but most often it was accomplished within a few hours. The greater the malignancy of disease the deeper the trance until the Higher Self was reached and made to tell the cause of the irritation. Then having ascertained the cause, the High Self was assured that the outer situation would be corrected and that it, the High Self, could go about correcting the rupture between it and its physical machine.

Now the desire self knows no reason, it reacts only to "yes" or "no" situations. But in the case of a well balanced person, the desire self refers all of its stimulus directly to the High Self. If the High Self reasons this to be good and in harmony in the environment in which it finds itself and in harmony with nature, it responds more to the physical body and takes better care of it. But if the desire self sends stimulations that are not considered good and are rejected by the High Self, and the desire self continues to send back such stimulation, the High Self becomes less and less aware of the physical body and begins to withdraw. And rapidly or slowly as the case may be, if this continues, eventually the Higher Self withdraws entirely and the physical body falls into what you call death.

Now some schools of the Inner Teachings neglect to tell their people that when the Higher Self withdraws from the physical body that it does not lose the desire body, but rather carries it on into the astral with it. And if the desire body has not been well trained, then it is apt to have acquired many, many desires of the flesh, and the High Self finds itself carrying out these desires on the astral plane. So you see, the honest teacher of the Inner Teachings always directs his pupils to practice detachment in all things that he does, so that the desire self does not become too impressed.

Some of your old civilizations like the Egyptians and the Hindus, knew full well that the desire body followed them into the astral. But the Egyptians believed also that it stayed with the physical body until it fell into dust. So since the wealthy and the ruling class of that time indulged very greatly in satisfying the lower self, their ingenious minds set about to concoct a drug with which they could embalm the bodies and keep them intact for thousands of years. They felt that by doing this the desire body would stay with the physical body and they could go on pursuing their pleasures on the astral plane. This is why the Kings and Pharaohs and their tombs were sealed and a curse put upon anyone who would open it.

Now, the Hindus had the opposite view. They believed that the desire body lasted only as long as the physical body remained intact. Therefore they cremated their bodies and destroyed them as soon as possible, believing that if they did not, they would continue to suffer the woes of Earth on the astral plane.

But fortunately they did teach the law of detachment which was beneficial in their case, because neither preserving nor destroying the body is going to make any difference. The desire body will always follow the High Self. There is no avoiding this, so you see the importance of training the desire body. If you want to have fast returns from the astral to the physical, then simply fail to train the desire body. This, my friends, is the reason all of your civilizations have fallen into the dust.

Man has allowed himself to become so entangled in the jungle of self-satisfaction, of the pursuit of the pleasures of the flesh, that he has brought about his own destruction.

Five different times has your Earth been swept clean. This was the reason for Atlantis, for Mu and Lemuria having been swept under the sea.

This was what brought about the great earthquake that destroyed the great civilization of Yu in your Himalayas many years ago. Your Earth has been racked and churned from end to end five different times, wiping off practically all mankind, animal and plant life.

You can destroy matter, but you cannot destroy that from which it comes, and so long as the life energy remains, life will return and try again.

Today your great civilization is tottering on the brink of such a fate. But again a civilization shall arise, a greater civilization, for Man has begun surging upward, so again he will build great civilizations and accomplish great things. He will develop a greater mind, he will uncover much of that which he has buried so deep. He shall again come into his own.

From that from which you came, you shall return.

I call forth the blessings of the Great Ones.

May their blessings be bestowed upon each of you.
May you go forth in peace and love.

Peace, my friends, peace, peace. ☸