Special: Peace, peace, peace. Greetings to thee, my beloved children:

I should like to speak with you for a few moments concerning the symbology of the birth and the life of the Great Master whose birth you are about to celebrate. I fear that very little thought is given to this among your peoples as they approach this season and I doubt that very many of them have any concept of the true symbology.

I shall begin by saying that this One's name in itself is symbolic. The name Jesus being symbolic of the Savior and Christ being love. Now this being the only Son, of course is also misunderstood, for as the Father-Mother God breathed forth in unison a Son was born, the one and only Son being love. And then, of course, as the three breathed forth the seven Spirits of Creation came into being. These were the ones who created the universes and all that they contained. Each one of these also symbolic, but this will be something for another time.

It was necessary at the beginning of this age for a God to be manifested, something that could be seen, felt and heard. In other words, something that could be observed by all of the senses of the carnal man. So one was chosen for this manifestation. He being one that through many incarnations had purified himself and was ready to receive this manifestation. This, of course, being Enoch.

Now, if the love center of man is to be opened, if true love is to grow and manifest itself in his life, certain preparations must be made, and this preparation is one of purification, the laying of the way for the Christ to enter, the opening up of the doors of the heart so that He may enter in. This was the symbology, of course, of the one whom you call John the Baptist, for he was pure of heart, of mind, of body and of deed. One preparing the way for the Morning Star.

Now the birth of the Child, of course, is symbolic of the birth of the Christ Child or the love in the heart of man and when this occurs it is only the beginning and then one must work, one must learn all of the lessons that are necessary to nourish and bring this Child into maturity. The Great Master, as soon as He had reached the age where he could begin to comprehend, began this preparation by learning all of the lessons that were necessary for Him to learn, in order to bring about the culmination and the complete development of the Christ Love within.

When He had finished this, conquered all the tests of life, mastered the lower self, so to speak, overcome the carnal man. When He had passed all of the most difficult tests, then and only then, was He crowned the Lotus and given the power which He demonstrated throughout His ministry. Until you have mastered the love, until you have become this love, you are not worthy to have power and the wisdom of God. The power or the Father aspect of God is not instilled in man until he has gained the love and the wisdom that is necessary to use this power.

But his entire life was one of symbology. Symbolizing the things that each must do if they are to reach the heights, which all men must eventually reach. And as He had finished His giving, His service, which He had performed during His ministry, His service to man, He was crucified and you too, must be crucified. This is symbolic of the crucifixion of the lower self, of the carnal man and then the overcoming of death, not death as you think of it, for the death that is spoken of here is the death which you live in every day. For as you rise out of this death into eternal life, you are transformed and you become master of it all.

Your peoples have great fear of death as they call it, but they do not realize that they are living in death. They are dead to the Truth and when man becomes Truth he is born again. He has overcome death, laid it aside and becomes Truth and enters life eternal.

I say to you, beloved friends, it is well to think upon these symbologies, to search out the true meanings and to prepare yourself. You are drawing to the close of an age, you are in the transition period, the time is short, beloved ones, prepare ye the way.

Purification and much time spent in searching self in the Silence will help one to grow more rapidly. But there are many stages of the Silence and the innermost sanctums of the Silence are entered into only by those who are pure of heart. No other can enter therein.

Beloved children, it has been my blessing to spend this time with you, and as I depart from you I should like to place a blessing upon you.

Beloved ones, I ask that the Great Ones, whom we all honor, may send forth their blessings of love to each of you and as these blessings of love flow to you, may each of you have the spark that will kindle this flame within your heart and cause it to burn brightly, letting your understanding of true love grow rapidly to maturity.

My love, my blessings I leave with each of you. ♣
