Master Teacher: Peace, Peace, Peace.

Where, Oh beloved Ones, do you find peace? Is this peace for which you search found in books? Is it found through the sharing of wisdom from another, or do we find it within our own hearts when we have made peace with ourselves and all creation. Peace cannot be found in a heart that is troubled, where there is any trace of greed or lust or self, or self-pity, there can be no peace. We must build our world, or our consciousness as did your creator build, and when your building is finished, then you shall rest in peace.

Earth man has been told that when he has decided to move in the path of everlasting love, he shall receive great help from beings who stand ready to give this help, when this decision is made. Many of your people believe they have made this decision, but they walk not in that path of love, for they are blind to their own weaknesses. The most difficult thing in the experience of Earth man will be to face himself squarely, to look deep into his own consciousness and recognize that which lurks in the darkness there.

But once this has been done, beloved ones, and the weaknesses are recognized and brought forth, then they can be eliminated, and man can truly walk in the light. This shall be man's most difficult moment, and many will not be able to face what they will see. They will not have the courage to cope with themselves, and this will be the chaff that will be blown from the wheat and shall float away to a new environment, but no man cometh into his own without this experience.

Many stand ready to help in these changing times, but before one can be helped, he must make this decision, and carry it forth to its completion, and as he carries out the weeding process, he will find help coming to him to smooth the way.

May the Peace, the love, and the understanding of all the great ones rest in the hearts of each of you.

Peace, beloved, Peace, Peace, so be it.
